

Five days left in Antalya. Lagos is next!

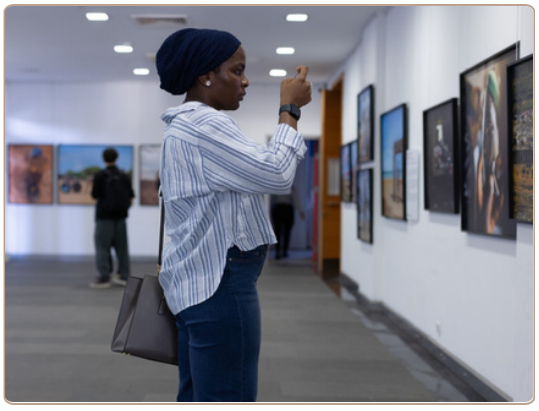

'Lines of Survival' is on the move, bringing powerful African photography and fresh perspectives on climate change to audiences across the world. With just five days remaining in Antalya, here's a look at what we've been up to — and where we're heading next.

A conversation worth continuing

Last Sunday, Africa Soft Power, in collaboration with Antalya Metropolitan Municipality, hosted 'Climate Change Is Personal. Is Climate Action?' alongside COP31.

From film and climate science to cultural heritage, our speakers explored whose experiences shape climate decisions, why storytelling matters and how we can turn awareness into meaningful action.

A big thank you to everyone who joined us, and to Darin J. Sallam, Miquel Muñoz Cabré, Ibrahim Tchan and moderator Julia DeFabo for a lively and thought-provoking conversation.

Antalya: Last chance to see 'Lines of Survival'

Five photographers. Different communities. Powerful stories.
Following its presentation at Bülent Ecevit Cultural Centre, 'Lines of Survival' is now on view at the Antalya Metropolitan Municipality Building.

Through the work of five emerging African photographers, the exhibition offers a compelling look at how communities are living with and responding to environmental change.

Closing 27 November. Just five days left!

Venue: Antalya Metropolitan Municipality Main Service Building - Foyer Area

New York: The story continues

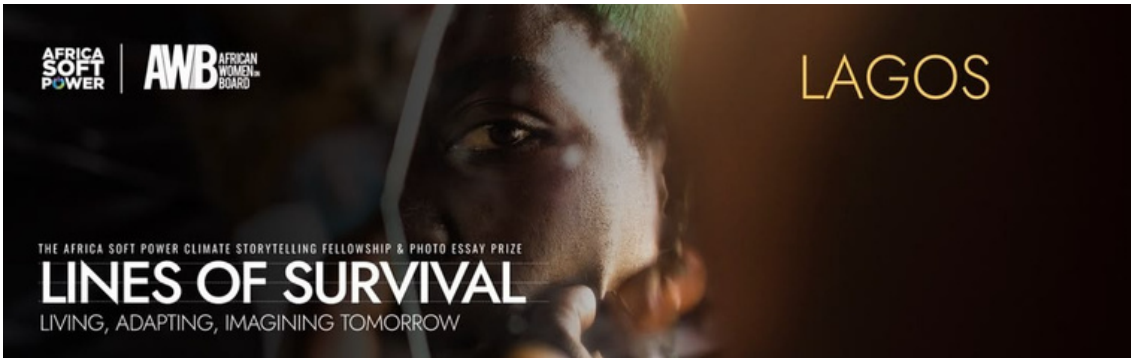

Some good news from across the Atlantic!

Following its debut during UNGA81 and Climate Week NYC, Lines of Survival has been extended at The Africa Center until March 2027.

If you're in New York, there's still time to experience the exhibition.

The Africa Center
1280 Fifth Avenue, New York
Tuesday–Sunday | 8 AM–4 PM
On view until March 2027

PLAN YOUR VISIT

Next stop: Lagos!

From New York to Antalya, and now Lagos.

We're delighted to announce that 'Lines of Survival' is coming to Nigeria this December! We're looking forward to bringing these remarkable photographs and the conversations they inspire to a new audience.

More details coming soon. Watch this space!

Help us take these stories further

Thestoriesthatchange howwesee theworldshouldn'tdisappearwhen the gallery lights go out. Through our Climate Storytelling initiative, we're creating opportunities for African and diaspora photographers to develop their work, reach international audiences and bring new perspectives into global conversations.

And there's much more we'd like to do.

We're keen to connect with individuals, organisations, foundations and brands interested in helping us take this work further.

Have an idea or interested in collaborating? We'd love to hear from you at asp@theafricasoftpowerproject.com.
